How We Will Calculate Your Balance - Average Daily Balance

Variable Rate Information: The Index used to determine your variable APRs is the Prime Rate published in the Money Rates column of the Wall Street Journal on the last business day the rate is published in each calendar month. If the Prime Rate changes, the new rate will take effect on the first day of the next billing cycle. As of 12/17/2008, the Prime Rate is 3.25%.

APR for Purchases and Balance Transfers: To determine the APR for purchases and balances transfers, we add a margin of 3.65% or 7.65% to the Index (Prime Rate), with a cap of 18.00%. If the Prime Rate decreases, the APR will also decrease. If the Prime Rate increases, the APR will also increase up to the cap of 18.00%.

APR for Cash Advances: To determine the APR for cash advances, we add a margin of 3.65% or 7.65% to the Index (Prime Rate), with a cap of 18.00%. If the Prime Rate decreases, the APR will also decrease. If the Prime Rate increases, the APR will also increase up to the cap of 18.00%.
