Introduction

Below is a list of consumer reporting companies updated for 2016.¹ Consumer reporting companies collect information and provide reports to other companies about you. These companies use these reports to inform decisions about providing you with credit, employment, residential rental housing, insurance, and in other decision making situations. The list below includes the three largest nationwide consumer reporting companies and several specialty reporting companies that focus on certain market areas and consumer segments. The list gives you tips so you can determine which of these companies may be important to you. It also makes it easier for you to take advantage of your legal rights to (1) obtain the information in your consumer reports, and (2) dispute report inaccuracies with companies as needed.

Who can see your consumer credit report

Consumer reporting companies must follow legal restrictions but generally can provide consumer credit reports and scores to an array of businesses, including:

- Lenders (including those that offer credit cards, home, payday, auto (including auto leasing) and student loans)

¹ This list is current as of January 2016. It includes entities that have identified themselves as consumer reporting companies, or have indicated when they provide consumers access to their personal consumer reports. The list incorporates information from the companies’ own self-descriptions that has not been independently verified by the Bureau. This list doesn’t cover every company in the industry. It is not intended to be all-inclusive. Nor does it reflect determinations as to whether any particular entity is subject to the Fair Credit Reporting Act or any part thereof. Furthermore, presence on, or absence from, this list does not indicate whether the consumer reporting company is subject to the Bureau’s supervisory or enforcement authority. To provide your suggested corrections or additions to the list, contact the Bureau at info@consumerfinance.gov and include “Attn: Jonah Kaplan” in the subject line.
- Employers and others such as government agencies (employment and background screening)
- Landlords and residential real estate management companies (tenant screening)
- Banks, credit unions, payment processors and retail stores that accept personal checks (check screening)
- Companies that market and sell products and services to low-income consumers and subprime credit applicants, such as short-term lending and rent-to-own businesses among others
- Debt buyers and collectors (e.g., medical debt collectors)
- Insurance companies (health, life, property insurance screening)
- Communications and utility companies (e.g., mobile phone; pay TV, electric, gas, water for utility bill repayment screening)
- Retail stores for product return fraud and abuse screening; as well as retail stores that offer financing such as appliance and rent-to-own businesses, among others
- Gaming casinos that extend credit to consumers

You can get rejected without warning

With the exception of employment screening, users of consumer reports generally do not warn you in advance if they are about to take an adverse action against you based in whole or in part on your consumer report. Outside of employment screening, adverse action notifications are provided after the fact, say, when you have already been rejected for a home loan, residential rental property or auto lease. The accuracy and completeness of your personal reports, therefore, is extremely important. The first step is to review them to ensure they are accurate and complete. A key purpose of this list is to provide the information you need, so you can decide for yourself which reports are important to you, and are worth requesting and fact-checking.
How to request a report

Under the Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA), all consumer reporting companies are required to provide you a copy of the information in your report if you request it. Many must do so every twelve months for free upon your request. Additionally, they must give you a free copy of your information if you request it if an adverse action is taken against you based on information in your report from that company and under other specific circumstances. All consumer reporting companies must provide you with a copy of your information for a reasonable fee (for calendar year 2016, the maximum allowable fee remains unchanged at $12.00). Requesting copies of your own consumer reports does not hurt your credit scores. For companies required to provide the information in your report for free annually upon request, they must do so within fifteen days of receiving your request.

Not every consumer reporting company will have information on every consumer. A specialty reporting company that reports on insurance claims, for example, will likely not have information about you if you have never filed an insurance claim. Also, some consumers with limited and/or out-of-date credit histories may not have enough information for reporting companies to have reports about them. You may be one of those consumers, although if you are making purchases using credit, it’s unlikely.

You can get most reports from the companies in this list for free

Most of the companies in this list will provide your information to you for free. We tell you which do. A few companies in the list will also provide you with a consumer score if you request it. We tell you which of those do too. To order your report from a company listed below, click on the company link we provide. Some companies have separate forms for requests by postal mail. We provide links to those forms for you too.

Know when to check a report

It’s important to fact-check your credit reports from the largest three nationwide consumer reporting companies (Equifax, Experian, TransUnion) every twelve months to ensure they are accurate, especially if you intend to purchase a home or car with credit, or otherwise intend to apply for credit in the future. If you are applying for a job, lease (home or auto) or insurance policy, fact-check specialty reports to ensure there are no errors. We give you detailed tips on when best to check your specialty report in the sections below as appropriate. Finally, if you have been a victim of identity theft, fact-check your reports.

You have the right to dispute the information in your report

If you find information in your consumer reports that you believe is inaccurate or incomplete, you have the legal right to dispute the report’s content with the consumer reporting company and the company that furnished the information to the reporting company such as your lender. Under the FCRA, companies must conduct – free of charge – a reasonable investigation of your dispute. The company that has provided the incorrect information must correct the error, and notify all of the consumer reporting companies to whom it provided the inaccurate information.

Of course, if your information is current and accurate, even if negative, you will not be able to remove it. Some companies may claim that they can remove negative information, but if the information in your report is accurate and current – beware! – it’s probably a credit repair scam.

You can learn more about disputing a reporting error on our website, and what to do if you see the same error in more than one report. You can also submit a complaint to us. We will forward your complaint to the company and work to get you a response.

We’re here if you have complaints about your report

We handle consumer reporting complaints about report accuracy and completeness errors, and other consumer reporting topics, such as, if you are dissatisfied with a company’s investigation of an earlier dispute, if you believe your consumer report was used improperly, if you have problems getting access to your own consumer reports, or if you are dissatisfied with direct-to-consumer reporting products and services, such as credit monitoring and identity protection. We also handle complaints about credit repair. Visit our website to see if a company listed below appears in our Consumer Complaint Database. There you can learn more about what consumers are saying about – and how companies are responding to – these important issues.
Nationwide consumer reporting companies

Equifax, Experian and TransUnion
These are the three largest nationwide providers of consumer reports. Their reports contain:

- Information about your re-payment history (as submitted by credit card companies, home and auto lenders (and leasing companies), and other creditors). Experian also reports some positive rent payment data, i.e., payments that are made as agreed between tenants and landlords. See Experian RentBureau below for more information).

- How much credit you have.

- How much credit you use.

- Information from debt buyers and collectors including medical debt.

- Public information, like bankruptcies, liens and judgments.

Free report:
Each of these companies will provide one free credit report every 12 months if you request it.

AnnualCreditReport.com will route you to any of the three nationwide reporting companies you select. Before giving you a copy of your report, each of these three reporting companies will ask you a few detailed questions to authenticate your identity. These questions are designed to be those only you can answer. They might be questions such as asking you to verify information about an existing or closed loan. The question could ask you to identify a street address where you have never lived and you would respond that it was not an address where you lived. The purpose of these questions is to protect the security of your information.
They might be questions such as asking you to verify information about an existing or closed loan. Or you could get a question to identify a street address where you have never lived. The purpose of these questions is to protect the security of your information.

If you run into difficulty getting your free Equifax, Experian or TransUnion annual credit report(s) from AnnualCreditReport.com or its toll-free phone number provided above, try contacting the respective institution(s) directly for help:

- Equifax, (800) 525-6285 (Option 6)
- Experian, (888) 397-3742 (Option 1 followed by Option 1)
- TransUnion, (800) 680-7289 (Option 2)
Employment screening

Employment screening companies provide verification information such as credit, employment, salary and education and professional license verification to employers and others. They may also provide criminal and fingerprint information from criminal record databases; driving record information; drug and alcohol testing and health screening information; and non-profit and volunteer activity verification. Many employment screening companies won’t have information on you unless you authorized an employer or other end-user to obtain a report. If possible, when you give your authorization, ask for the name(s) of the employment screening company being used. Contact those reporting companies to fact-check your reports.

Tenant screening

If you are applying as a tenant for a residential property, you may want to ask the management company whether it will be pulling your consumer report(s). If the answer is yes, ask for the consumer reporting company name(s). Contact those companies to fact-check those reports and fix them as needed. A tenant screening report with negative information in it could result in a rejected lease application, or it may get approved, but with tough conditions inserted into the lease agreement such as requiring you to pay twelve months of rent in advance of your move-in date. As such, if you can, consider holding off on submitting your application until you can fact-check your reports.

Experian RentBureau
Collects rent payment history data from property owners and residential real estate managers, electronic rent payment services and collection companies, and makes that information available to the multifamily housing industry through tenant screening reporting companies. Experian also includes some positive rent data it receives from ExperianRentBureau in its standard credit reports. Positive rent data refers to payments that are paid as agreed between tenants and landlords. It excludes derogatory rental data, i.e., delinquent and defaulted rent payment history, because debt collectors already report that data directly to consumer reporting companies. See Experian above for more information.
