

Mortgage Origination

These Mortgage Origination Examination Procedures (Procedures) consist of modules covering the various elements of the mortgage origination process; each module identifies specific matters for review.

Examiners will use the Procedures in examinations of mortgage brokers and mortgage lenders. Before using the Procedures, examiners should complete a risk assessment and examination scope memorandum in accordance with general CFPB procedures. Depending on the scope, and in conjunction with the compliance management system review, including consumer complaint review, each examination will cover one or more of the following modules. Module 8 – Examiner Conclusions and Wrap-Up is a required module and must be completed. The modules are as follows:

Examination Objectives

1. To assess the quality of a supervised entity's compliance management systems in its mortgage origination business.
2. To identify acts or practices that materially increase the risk of violations of Federal consumer financial law, and associated harm to consumers, in connection with mortgage origination.
3. To gather facts that help determine whether a supervised entity engages in acts or practices that are likely to violate Federal consumer financial law in connection with mortgage origination.
4. To determine, in accordance with CFPB internal consultation requirements, whether a violation of a federal consumer financial law has occurred and whether further supervisory or enforcement actions are appropriate.

Background

This section of the Procedures provides background on the mortgage business and the federal consumer financial law requirements that apply.

1. Mortgage Types

Residential mortgage loans offer a variety of features to meet differing consumer needs. The length of a mortgage is usually 30 years or less, but can vary from one year to 50 years. Interest rates can be fixed or adjustable. Some adjustable rate mortgage loans (ARMs) are "hybrid," having a fixed interest rate for a certain period of time and then changing to an adjustable rate. Hybrid ARMs often are identified informally using two numbers, such as 5/1. The first number identifies the number of years the interest rate will be fixed, and the second number identifies the frequency with which the interest rate will adjust after the fixed interest rate period ends. A "5/1" loan would have a fixed interest rate for five years, and then the interest rate would adjust one time per year. Alternatively, the second number denotes the number of years the loan will have an adjustable rate: in a "2/28 loan," the loan would have a fixed interest rate for two years, and then the interest rate would adjust periodically over the subsequent 28 years.

Most, but not all, loans are "fully amortizing," meaning that the borrower pays down part of the principal and the full amount of interest that is due each month so that at the end of the loan term, the principal is paid off. Other loans might not amortize fully over their terms. One type is a balloon payment mortgage where payments may be made for a period of time, with the remaining balance due in one lump sum, or "balloon." Another type is an "interest-only" (I-O) loan, in which only the interest is paid for a certain time period at the beginning of the loan; after the initial period, the borrower either makes increased principal and interest payments to amortize the principal over the remaining term, or pays a large "balloon" payment, usually at the end of the term. These loans can be fixed- or adjustable-rate. In addition, for a period of time, payment option adjustable rate mortgages (Pay Option ARMs, or Option Payment ARMs) were offered to many consumers. These loans provided borrowers with several payment choices each month during the loan's introductory period, including a minimum payment that was less than the interest accruing and due on the principal each month. If the borrower chose the minimum payment option, the accrued but unpaid interest was added to the loan balance, so the principal amount actually increased. This outcome is known as negative amortization. Eventually the loan is recast after the introductory period (typically five years), and the borrower's fully amortizing payments typically increase in order to repay the increased principal and the interest rate. Balloon loans, interest-only loans and Pay Option ARMs often are called "non-traditional loans."

Mortgage originators offer various mortgage products that may be classified in different ways, such as:

a. Purpose

Mortgages often are categorized by whether they are used to purchase real property (called purchase money loans) or to refinance an existing loan (refinances). Refinance loans can either be "no cash out" or "cash out" loans. "No cash out" loans are refinance transactions where the proceeds of the new loan are used to pay off existing liens and can sometimes include the closing costs associated with the transaction. There is typically a de-minimus amount of funds that the borrower can receive back from the transaction and it still be considered a "no cash out" transaction. "Cash out" loans are loans made for more than the existing loan's outstanding principal balance. The borrower receives the cash borrowed in excess of the amount necessary to pay off the existing loan and associated closing costs. Additional loans (junior liens) other than the primary loan (first lien) may also be paid off with the proceeds of the new transaction. The original purpose of these additional loans and secondary market requirements will determine if the new transaction would be considered a "cash out" or a "no cash out" transaction.

Construction loans, bridge loans, temporary loans, or combined construction to permanent financing loans are examples of short-term loans for other purposes. Another category is a "home equity" loan, in which the borrower can receive funds to use for any purpose by borrowing against home equity. Equity is the amount the property is currently worth, minus the outstanding principal balance of any other mortgage the consumer has. Reverse mortgages are available to older homeowners to borrow against the equity they have in their homes. (See below for fuller discussion of reverse mortgages.)

b. Lien position

Lien position determines which mortgage loan receives priority over other loans in the event of a foreclosure or bankruptcy. A mortgage that is in a first lien position, sometimes called a senior loan, has priority for payment over a mortgage in a junior lien position if there is a foreclosure or bankruptcy proceeding. The proceeds from the foreclosure sale are divided according to lien position. A "simultaneous second lien" is a second lien originated at the same time as a first lien mortgage, which may allow a consumer to borrow an amount that is 100 percent of the value of the home. Sometimes lenders have allowed consumers to borrow an amount greater than the value of the property, although this practice is not common in today's mortgage marketplace. Payments necessary for a simultaneous second lien will have an impact on the borrower's ability to repay the mortgage.

c. Closed-end or open-end

Most purchase money and refinance mortgages are considered "closed-end credit" under the Truth in Lending Act, generally consisting of installment financing where the amount borrowed and repayment schedule are set at the transaction's outset. Closed-end mortgages can take first or junior lien positions.

In contrast, home equity lines of credit (HELOCs) are "open-end credit," extended to a consumer under a plan in which:

- i. the creditor reasonably contemplates repeated transactions;
- ii. the credit line generally is made available to the consumer to the extent that any unpaid balance is repaid; and
- iii. the creditor may impose a finance charge from time to time on an outstanding unpaid balance.¹

During the time while borrowers are able to draw down funds, they usually must pay a monthly interest charge on the outstanding balance. If the borrower owes funds after a fixed period of years, called the "draw period," the consumer enters the "repayment period" and must pay off the outstanding balance in regular periodic payments of principal and interest. The repayment period is also a fixed term of years. HELOCs are often, but not always, in a junior lien position.

Depending upon the lender and the HELOC agreement, the consumer may have to pay back the entire outstanding balance as soon as the draw period ends. In these cases, there is no repayment period, just a balloon payment in the amount of the outstanding balance when the draw period ends. HELOCs usually have an adjustable interest rate that changes over time, so the consumer's payments may not be the same from month to month.

d. Reverse Mortgages

A reverse mortgage is a special type of loan that allows homeowners 62 and older to borrow against the equity in their homes. It is called "reverse" because the consumer receives payments from the lender, without making loan payments to the lender. In exchange for borrowing the money and receiving these payments, the borrower grants a lien interest in the home in the favor of the lender. The lender charges interest each month and is paid off when the homeowner (which includes the spouse of the homeowner) leaves the home permanently. In taking out a reverse mortgage loan, a consumer can receive a lump-sum payment, regular monthly payments, or a line of credit. The homeowner does not have to pay back the loan as long as he continues to live in the home, maintain it, and stay current on expenses like homeowner's insurance and property taxes. If the homeowner moves, passes away, or goes into assisted living or a nursing home on a long-term basis, the loan has to be paid off, usually by selling the house.

The vast majority of reverse mortgages extended today are through the Home Equity Conversion Mortgage (HECM) program, which is the reverse mortgage product insured by the Federal Housing Administration.

Because of the unique features of reverse mortgages, examiners should follow the procedures that are specific to reverse mortgages and be aware that other examination procedures may not apply to reverse mortgages.

e. Ability-to-Repay and Qualified Mortgages

The Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act (Dodd-Frank Act) amended the Truth in Lending Act (TILA) to require that for almost all closed-end transactions secured by a dwelling, creditors make a reasonable, good faith determination that the consumer can repay the loan. The requirement applies generally to closed-end loans secured by a dwelling, including manufactured housing, conventional and governmental loans, prime and subprime (see below). Lenders can meet the ability-to-repay (ATR) requirement by making qualified mortgages (QMs), as defined within Regulation Z. As a result, mortgages are usually referred to one of two categories of mortgages: QM, which contains a presumption of compliance with the ability to repay requirements, and Non-QM (which must comply with the general ability-to-repay requirements directly).

The ATR rule does not apply to HELOCs, timeshares, reverse mortgages, temporary or bridge loans, or loans to finance the initial construction of a dwelling. It also does not apply to certain types of creditors making loans under programs for low- and middle- income borrowers, such as housing finance agencies, Community Development Financial Institutions and certain nonprofit organizations.

f. Conventional Lending

Conventional lending generally refers to prime standardized mortgage products that are not government-backed loans (discussed below). Conventional loans can be "conforming" or "non-conforming." Conventional conforming mortgages meet the underwriting and documentation standards set by the government sponsored enterprises (GSEs): Federal National Mortgage Association (Fannie Mae) and Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation (Freddie Mac). Loans that are eligible for purchase by the GSEs have QM status under a temporary provision that expires January 10, 2021 (or whenever the GSEs exit conservatorship, whichever is earlier). Non-conforming mortgages may have, among other attributes, principal balances that exceed the loan limits set by the GSEs.

g. Governmental Support

Government-backed lending includes mortgage lending that is insured by the Federal Housing Administration (FHA) or guaranteed by either the U.S. Department of Veteran Affairs (VA) or the U.S. Department of Agriculture’s (USDA) Rural Housing Service (RHS), among other agencies. Government-supported loans generally offer terms similar to conventional loans, but these loans provide additional benefits to consumers such as smaller down payments, higher loan-to-value ratios (amount of loan in proportion to the appraised value of the home), less restrictive qualifying criteria or lower interest rates. Consumers that qualify for these loans must pay additional insurance or guarantee fees in order to obtain the government backing. FHA and VA have both defined what constitutes a Qualified Mortgage (QM) under the authority granted to them under the Dodd-Frank Act. Other government-backed loans that are eligible for guarantee or insurance, receive QM status under a temporary provision that expires January 10, 2021. All of these loans are collectively referred to as “Agency” loans in these examination procedures.

h. Subprime and Alt-A Lending

Subprime mortgages carry interest rates higher than the rates of prime mortgages. These loans might also be called “higher-priced” or “high cost” mortgages, depending on how much the interest rate exceeds the average prime offer rate. A subprime mortgage generally has a higher cost and is offered to prospective borrowers with impaired credit records – those borrowers whose credit rating is “subprime.” The higher interest rate is intended to compensate the lender for accepting the greater risk in lending to such borrowers. Traditionally, “subprime” has been the riskiest lending category, followed by “Alt-A,” or Alternative-A, and then A-paper, or “prime,” as the least risky. Alt-A borrowers may have prime credit, but some aspect of the loan makes it riskier.

2. Business of Mortgage Origination

Mortgage lending generally occurs through retail, wholesale, or correspondent lending channels. Sometimes there are no clear lines of demarcation among the channels, as a participant may operate in more than one of them. Each channel is described in more detail below.

a. Retail Channel

In the retail channel, the lender conducts the origination process directly with the consumer, either in person or through an online application. An employee of the lender, generally called a loan officer, solicits the loan, takes the application, and tracks the application through to the closing process.

b. Wholesale Channel – Mortgage Brokers

In the wholesale channel, a mortgage broker solicits the loan and takes the application from the consumer. Mortgage brokers are independent contractors and are not employees of the lender. The broker establishes relationships with multiple mortgage lenders and offers different mortgage loan products from these lenders. Mortgage brokers generally do not make underwriting decisions and do not actually fund the loans. In this channel, it is the mortgage lender that makes the underwriting decision, based on information provided by the broker. These mortgage lenders, called wholesale lenders, often are divisions of larger depository institutions. Generally, a wholesale lender requires a broker to enter into a wholesale lending agreement before the broker may originate loans on the lender's behalf.

In a variant of standard wholesale mortgage originations, some brokers “table fund” loans. In a table-funded transaction, the mortgage broker closes the loan as the lender of record and then assigns the loan to a purchaser at or immediately after the closing. The loan purchaser provides the funding for the loan, but the documents name the mortgage broker as the creditor.

c. Correspondent Channel – Small Mortgage Lenders

Correspondent lending, a form of retail lending, is often comprised of smaller institutions, or mortgage bankers. Correspondent lenders are the primary interface with consumers, conducting all steps in the mortgage origination process and funding their own loans. They generally originate and deliver loans pursuant to underwriting standards set by other lenders or investors, usually larger depository lenders. What differentiates a correspondent lender from a retail lender is that correspondent lenders will not portfolio or securitize these loans but will always sell their loans to another aggregator or investor. In addition to soliciting consumers directly, correspondent lenders may also receive applications and mortgage documents from mortgage brokers. Generally, an investor will require a correspondent lender to enter into a written correspondent lending agreement before the correspondent may originate loans for sale to the wholesale investor.

There are instances where mortgage brokers desire to make a transition and become correspondent lenders. These mortgage brokers typically identify themselves as a mini-correspondent lender. The mini-correspondent model is a non-delegated arrangement where the mortgage “broker” performs a subset of the mortgage origination activities in partnership with a traditional wholesale lender, who—in this instance—acts as the investor. The mini-correspondent will fund the loan in its name, usually using a warehouse line of credit, and then sells the loan to the wholesale lender/investor. While some mortgage brokers successfully transition into a mortgage banker, there may be instances where a mortgage broker remains as a mini-correspondent lender and never makes the complete transition to being an independent mortgage banker for various business-related reasons. Instead, the mortgage broker continues to conduct certain activities as a traditional mortgage broker, despite entering into mini-correspondent arrangements with particular wholesale lenders.

3. Federal Consumer Financial Law Requirements and Supporting Guidance

Mortgage originators must comply with several federal consumer financial laws:

- a. The Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act (RESPA) and its implementing regulation, Regulation X, require lenders or mortgage brokers, with respect to mortgage origination, to provide borrowers with disclosures regarding the nature and costs of the real estate settlement process. RESPA also protects borrowers against certain abusive practices, such as fees or kickbacks for the referral of settlement service business and arrangements to evade the RESPA requirements. RESPA also places requirements on the administration of, and limitations upon required deposits into, escrow accounts. Generally, for closed-end loans secured by a dwelling, application and closing disclosures are provided under Regulation Z, pursuant to the TILA-RESPA Integrated Disclosure rule, which requires a Loan Estimate and a Closing Disclosure (collectively, Integrated Disclosures) to be provided for loans with applications received after August 1, 2015. For applications received before August 1, 2015, reverse mortgages, HELOCs, chattel mortgage loans and loans made by a person or entity who makes five or fewer mortgage loans in a year, the RESPA disclosures required at or before origination include:
 - i. Good Faith Estimate (GFE) of settlement costs within three business days after application;
 - ii. An initial notice explaining whether the servicing rights to the loan may be transferred;
- b. The Truth in Lending Act (TILA) and its implementing regulation, Regulation Z, provide a uniform system for creditors' disclosures of credit terms. Generally, for closed-end loans secured by a dwelling, application and closing disclosures are provided under Regulation Z, pursuant to the TILA-RESPA Integrated Disclosure rule, which requires the Integrated Disclosures to be provided for loans with applications received after August 1, 2015. For applications received before August 1, 2015, reverse mortgages, HELOCs, chattel mortgage loans, and loans made by a person or entity who makes five or fewer mortgages loans in a year, the TILA disclosures required at or before origination include:
 - i. Initial Truth-in-Lending (initial TILA) disclosure within three business days after application; and
 - ii. Final Truth-in-Lending (final TILA) disclosure three business days before closing.
- c. In addition, Regulation Z:
 - i. Imposes certain advertising rules;
 - ii. Requires written disclosure and re-disclosure of certain loan terms;

- iii. Requires that creditors make a good faith determination of the borrower's ability to repay and verify information they relied on to do so;
- iv. Provides consumers with rescission rights in certain circumstances;
- v. Provides consumers with legal remedies if the creditor fails to consider ability to repay;
- vi. Delineates and prohibits certain unfair and deceptive mortgage lending practices;
- vii. Restricts certain mortgage loan originator compensation;
- viii. Requires certain mortgage loan originator qualifications;
- ix. Requires loan originator identification on certain loan documents;
- x. Requires depository institutions to have policies and procedures to ensure and monitor compliance with certain requirements;
- xi. Prohibits certain terms and practices in the origination of "higher-priced" loans and prohibit additional terms and practices on a subset of these loans known as "high cost loans;"
- xii. Requires escrow accounts for certain higher- priced mortgage loans;
- xiii. Prohibits certain appraisal practices; and
- xiv. Prohibits mandatory arbitration, the financing of credit insurance, or waivers of federal rights.

For loans covered by either the Integrated Disclosures or the pre-existing TILA and RESPA requirements, several additional disclosures are necessary, depending on the type of loan.

- i. Provision of a written list of homeownership counseling organizations that provide relevant counseling services in the loan applicant's location;
 - ii. Disclosure of affiliated business arrangements;
 - iii. Special information booklet, otherwise known as "Your home loan toolkit: A step-by-step guide;" and
 - iv. Consumer Handbook on Adjustable Rate Mortgages (CHARM) booklet.
- d. The Secure and Fair Enforcement for Mortgage Licensing Act of 2008 (SAFE Act) and its implementing regulations, Regulation G (Federal) and Regulation H (State), establish requirements for registration and, when applicable, standards for licensing of individuals who are residential mortgage loan originators. The registration and licensing requirements are administered, in part, through the Nationwide Mortgage Licensing

System and Registry (NMLSR). Each loan originator, unless exempt, must obtain and maintain a state loan originator's license if not an employee of a covered financial institution, register through the NMLSR, obtain a unique identifier and provide it to consumers in certain circumstances, and maintain registration.

- e. The Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act (GLBA), through its implementing regulation, Regulation P, requires covered entities to provide privacy notices and limit information sharing in particular ways.
- f. The Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA) and its implementing regulation, Regulation V, impose disclosure and other requirements on mortgage lenders that obtain information from a consumer reporting agency to determine a consumer's credit worthiness. These include the disclosure of credit score information, disclosure of adverse action, and disclosure of risk-based pricing.
- g. Mortgage Acts and Practices – Advertising Rule (MAP Rule), and its implementing regulation, Regulation N, applies only to non-depository mortgage lenders and state-chartered credit unions, as well as entities that market and advertise mortgage products but are not mortgage lenders, such as mortgage brokers, real estate brokers, advertising agencies, lead generators, and rate aggregators. The MAP Rule sets forth specific deceptive acts and practices in the advertising of mortgage loan products and prohibits misrepresentation in any commercial communication concerning terms of mortgage loan products.²
- h. The Equal Credit Opportunity Act (ECOA) and its implementing regulation, Regulation B, prohibit creditors from discriminating against any applicant with respect to any aspect of a credit transaction:
 - i. On the basis of race, color, religion, national origin, sex, marital status, or age (provided the applicant has the capacity to contract);
 - ii. Because all or part of the applicant's income derives from any public assistance program; or
 - iii. Because the applicant has in good faith exercised any right under the Consumer Credit Protection Act.³

Creditors also are prohibited from making any oral or written statement, in advertising or otherwise, to applicants or prospective applicants that would discourage, on a prohibited basis, a reasonable person from making or pursuing an application. ECOA's fair lending requirements are predominately covered in the Bureau's fair lending examinations.

² The MAP Rule became effective on August 19, 2011. Mortgage Acts and Practices – Advertising, 76 Fed. Reg. 43826 (July 22, 2011).

In addition, ECOA and Regulation B require lenders to retain information related to applications, existing accounts, and prescreened solicitations for a specified period of time, and to provide adverse action notices and appraisal and other written valuations to consumers, such as those generated by automated valuation models (AVMs) and broker price opinions.

- i. The Home Mortgage Disclosure Act (HMDA) and its implementing regulation, Regulation C, require mortgage lenders that meet certain threshold conditions to collect, report to federal regulators, and disclose to the public certain data about applications for, and originations and purchases of, home purchase loans, home improvement loans, and refinancings for each calendar year. The data include information about the loan or application (e.g., loan amount, loan purpose, action taken), the applicant (e.g., sex, ethnicity and race), and the property (e.g., property type and geographic information such as census tract, state and metropolitan statistical area (MSA)). HMDA's requirements are covered in the Bureau's HMDA exams.

These laws historically have been implemented by regulations published by one or more of seven federal agencies, including the Federal Trade Commission, the Department of Housing and Urban Development, the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, and other prudential regulators. The Dodd-Frank Act generally transferred these agencies' rulemaking authority under those laws to the Bureau, which published implementing regulations under its authority, effective beginning December 30, 2011. When examiners observe violations of regulatory requirements, they should cite to the regulation that was in effect at the time the act occurred.

The CFPB has issued policy guidance discussing the above regulations and detailing how the Bureau intends to exercise its supervision and enforcement authority. Below are descriptions and links to two guidance documents regarding mini-correspondent lenders and third-party service providers.

- j. As discussed above, some mortgage brokers take on the title of a "mini-correspondent lender" as they transition to correspondent lending. However, just because a party calls itself a "mini-correspondent lender" does not mean that it is automatically exempt from regulations applicable to transactions involving mortgage brokers. See Policy Guidance on Supervisory and Enforcement Considerations Relevant to Mortgage Brokers Transitioning to Mini-Correspondent Lenders (July 9, 2014), CFPB Policy Guidance, http://files.consumerfinance.gov/f/201407_cfpb_guidance_mini-correspondent-lenders.pdf.
- k. Third-party service providers for supervised banks and non-banks are expected to comply with federal consumer financial law. However, the outsourcing of mortgage origination activities to third-party service providers (e.g., software vendors, mortgage brokers, settlement agents) does not limit or remove a supervised bank or non-bank's obligations under consumer financial services law. Supervised banks and non-banks are expected to oversee their business relationships with service providers in a manner that ensures compliance with federal consumer financial law by all parties. See CFPB Bulletin 2012-03, Service Providers (April 13, 2012), http://files.consumerfinance.gov/f/201204_cfpb_bulletin_service-providers.pdf.

To carry out the objectives set forth in the Examination Objectives section, the examination process also will include assessing other risks to consumers generally prohibited by the Dodd-Frank Act. These risks may include potentially unfair, deceptive, or abusive acts or practices (UDAAPs) with respect to mortgage originators' interactions with consumers.⁴

Please refer to CFPB's examination procedures regarding UDAAPs for more information about the legal standards and the CFPB's approach to examining for UDAAPs.

The particular facts in a case are crucial to a determination of unfair, deceptive, or abusive acts or practices. As set out in the Examination Objectives section, examiners should consult with Headquarters to determine whether the applicable legal standards have been met before a violation of any federal consumer financial law can be cited, including a UDAAP violation.

General Considerations

Completing the following examination modules will allow examiners to develop a thorough understanding of mortgage brokers' and lenders' practices and operations. To complete the modules, examiners should obtain and review, as applicable, each entity's:

1. organizational charts and process flowcharts;
2. board minutes, annual reports, or the equivalent to the extent available;
3. relevant management reporting;
4. policies and procedures;
5. rate sheets;
6. loan applications, verification of information relied on in determining ability to repay;
7. loan account documentation, notes, disclosures, and all other contents of loan underwriting and closing files;
8. operating checklists, worksheets, and review documents;

⁴ Sec. 1036 of the Dodd Frank Act (July 21, 2010).

9. relevant computer program and system details;
10. wholesale and correspondent lending agreements, due diligence and monitoring procedures, and lending procedures;
11. underwriting guidelines; compensation policies;
12. historical examination information;
13. audit and compliance reports; management's responses to findings;
14. training programs and materials;
15. service provider contracts;⁵
16. advertisements; and
17. complaints.

Information requests for mortgage origination examinations are geared towards obtaining the type of information examiners need prior to an examination team's scheduled on-site review of an institution. The information requests can be tailored to reflect an institution's specific risk profile or the scope of the particular examination.

Transaction testing should occur for all mortgage origination focused examinations. In selecting a sample of files for transaction testing, examiners should use reasonable sampling methods, which may require use of a judgmental or statistical sample. The sample size selected for transaction testing should reflect the size, product line, and risk profile of the institution and the scope of the examination. The sample size should allow examiners to gain a thorough understanding of the nature of the institution's mortgage origination business line(s).

Examiners should obtain a list of consumer files, as requested in the mortgage origination information requests, and select a valid sample for further review.

1. Consider weighting the sample to review more loans from branches with a larger volume of complaints.
2. Obtain complete loan files, which contain the disclosures required by federal consumer financial laws and other legal documents, as well as underwriting documents, rate sheets, and all documents provided to and by the consumer.

⁵CFPB issued a bulletin highlighting its expectation that supervised banks and non-banks oversee their business relationships with service providers in a manner that ensures compliance with federal consumer financial law. See CFPB Bulletin 2012-03, Service Providers (April 13, 2012), http://files.consumerfinance.gov/f/201204_cfpb_bulletin_service-providers.pdf.

When on-site, examiners should review the sample of loan origination files to assess an institution's compliance with the federal consumer financial laws as further described in the individual modules below.

As resources permit, examiners also should conduct interviews with management, staff and third parties to determine whether they understand and consistently follow the policies, procedures, and regulatory requirements applicable to mortgage lending; manage change appropriately, including implementation of new requirements; and implement effective controls. Examiners also should consider observing customer interactions and, if consumer complaints or the document review indicate potential concerns, interviewing customers.

Examination Procedures

Module 1 – Company Business Model

Conduct initial interviews for all relevant departments. This may occur during deep-dive meetings held with the institution at the beginning of on-site examination activities. Some of the information outlined below may have already been gathered during the pre-scoping and information gathering portion of the examination.

1. Determine the type of mortgage origination channel(s) used by the entity. Is the entity:
 - a. Acting as a broker;
 - b. Acting as a correspondent;
 - c. Lending through a retail system;
 - d. Lending through a wholesale or correspondent system; or
 - e. Using a combination of these strategies?
2. Determine the funding source(s) the entity uses.
3. Ascertain the product volume, mix, trends, and concentrations across all branches.
4. Review the organizational chart and reporting structure for mortgage loan origination to determine the reporting structure and responsibilities of key managers.
5. Review and list the types of products the entity offers. Determine whether the entity offers hybrid ARMs, interest-only loans, Payment Option ARMs, simultaneous second liens, Alt- A loans, or subprime loans. If the entity offers reverse mortgages, determine whether it offers HECMs and, if so, what percentage of the reverse mortgages originated are HECMs.
6. Determine whether the quality control (or audit, as applicable), underwriting, and appraisal functions operate independently of the production function (sales unit).
7. Determine whether the entity allows borrowers to choose their title insurer or requires the borrowers to use an affiliated settlement service provider. Please refer to the RESPA examination procedures, Purchase of Title Insurance – 12 CFR 1024.16; Payment or Receipt of Referral or Unearned Fees– 12 CFR 1024.14, and Affiliated Business Arrangements – 12 CFR 1024.15, for more information.
8. Assess whether fees, payments, advances, loans, services, discounts, free website advertising, rebate, or other consideration given or received from any settlement service provider may be considered a kickback, unearned fee, or thing of value in return for the referral of settlement services business. Please refer to the RESPA examination procedures, 12 CFR 1024.14, for more information.

9. Assess the overall effectiveness of the entity's compliance management system. Please refer to the Compliance Management Review (CMR) examination procedures for more information.
10. Determine whether the entity reviews its mortgage origination activities to prevent unfair, deceptive, or abusive acts or practices. Please refer to the UDAAP examination procedures, Management and Policy-Related Examination Procedures, for more information.
11. Determine whether the entity reviews its policies or scripts for explaining loan terms to consumers for deceptive language or tactics. Please refer to the UDAAP examination procedures, Management and Policy-Related Examination Procedures, for more information.
12. Determine whether the entity reviews its mortgage origination activities for evidence of coercion of or fraud against the borrower. Please refer to the UDAAP examination procedures, Management and Policy-Related Examination Procedures, for more information.
13. Determine whether the entity's practices obscure or obfuscate key loan terms, fees, or provisions. Please refer to the UDAAP examination procedures, Availability of Terms or Services as Advertised, for more information.

Module 2 – Advertising and Marketing

This module applies to both mortgage brokers and mortgage lenders. Examiners should evaluate the originator's advertising materials and disclosures across all media, including print, television, radio, telephone solicitation scripts, and electronic media (including the Internet, email and text messages) for any material misrepresentations. If the entity engages in telemarketing, examiners also should listen to a selection of the sales calls. Finally, examiners should determine whether the entity employs or acts as a third-party lead generator, and should understand the extent of any relationships that the entity has with affiliated or other service providers (i.e., as a broker or agent) to advertise, offer, or provide loans or other products and services.

This module includes CMR or Compliance Management System (CMS) procedures specific to advertising and marketing. Examiners should develop a detailed understanding of the entity's marketing program to determine whether its marketing policies, procedures, and practices are consistent with the requirements of applicable laws and regulations. Examiners should focus CMS review and testing on assessing the program's effectiveness and finding the root cause for any potential violations found in transaction testing.

Module 3 - Loan Originators

This module focuses on an entity's compliance with the compensation, qualification, identification, and policy and procedure requirements for loan originators. Examiners should be prepared to review compensation agreements, tax records, receipts and other appropriate documentation in order to identify all compensation and incentive plans and confirm compliance with the Loan Originator Rule. For the qualification and documentation aspect of the Loan Originator Rule, examiners should be prepared to assess whether loan originators are appropriately registered and are identified on the required documents. For loan originators that are not required to be registered, examiners should be prepared to assess whether background qualification requirements have been met by the institution.

This module includes CMS procedures specific to loan originators. Examiners should develop a detailed understanding of the entity's compensation schemes and registration and reporting structure to determine whether its policies, procedures, and practices are consistent with applicable law. This includes an analysis of an institution's compliance monitoring and compliance audit results. Examiners should focus CMS review and testing on assessing the program's effectiveness and finding the root cause for any violations found in transaction testing.

Regulation Z

Prohibited Payments to Loan Originators

1. Review loan files, loan originator compensation agreements, including incentive programs, and other applicable records to confirm that loan originators are not receiving prohibited payments.
2. Assess whether, in connection with a consumer credit transaction secured by a dwelling, no loan originator receives and no person pays to a loan originator, directly or indirectly, compensation that is based on any of the transaction's terms or a factor that is a proxy for a term. (12 CFR 1026.36(d)(1)(i).⁷ Please refer to the TILA examination procedures Prohibited Payments to Loan Originators , 12 CFR 1026.36(d)(1)(i) for more information.

⁷The amount of credit extended is not deemed to be a transaction term, provided compensation received by or paid to a loan originator, directly or indirectly, is based on a fixed percentage of the amount of credit extended. Such compensation may be subject to a minimum or maximum dollar amount.

TILA examination procedures, Prohibited Payments to Loan Originators, 12 CFR 1026.36(d)(1)(i) for more information.

4. Determine whether creditors and loan originator organizations have retained records related to loan originator compensation and compensation agreements for three years after the date of payment. Please refer to the TILA examination procedures General Procedures, for more information.
5. Prohibition on Steering

1. Confirm that, in connection with a consumer credit transaction secured by a dwelling, a loan originator does not direct or “steer” a consumer to consummate a transaction based on the fact that the originator will receive greater compensation from the creditor in that transaction than in other transactions the originator offered or could have offered to the consumer, unless the consummated transaction is in the consumer’s interest. Please refer to the TILA examination procedures, Prohibition on Steering, 12 CFR 1026.36(e)(1), for more information.

The rule provides a safe harbor to facilitate compliance with the prohibition on steering in 12 CFR 1026.36(e)(1). The Loan Estimate and Closing Disclosure (collectively, Integrated Disclosures) are required for most closed-end loans secured by a dwelling. Examiners should obtain and review a sample of complete loan files to assess the entity's compliance. If consumer complaints regarding mortgage origination and closing indicate potential violations of disclosure requirements, examiners may also conduct interviews of consumers from the sample and ask questions relevant to each topic area below.

This module includes CMS procedures specific to loan disclosures. Examiners should develop a detailed understanding of the entity's ability to timely and accurately provide all required disclosures to determine whether its policies, procedures, and practices are consistent with applicable law. Examiners should focus CMS review and testing on assessing the program's effectiveness and finding the root cause for any violations found in transaction testing.

Module 5 – Loan Disclosures and Terms - Other Residential Mortgage Loans

This module focuses on the disclosures required for closed- and open-end residential transactions that are not subject to the TILA-RESPA Integrated Disclosure rule. These transactions include reverse mortgages, HELOCs, and chattel-dwelling loans (e.g., loans secured by a mobile home or by a dwelling that is not attached to real property). They also include closed-end residential mortgages where the application was received prior to August 1, 2015, the effective date for the TILA-RESPA Integrated Disclosure requirements. The disclosures required for these loans include TILA disclosures, GFEs, HUD-1/HUD-1-A, the affiliated business arrangement disclosure, and servicing transfer notices. During transaction testing, examiners should identify acts, practices, and materials that indicate potential violations of federal consumer financial laws.

This module includes CMS procedures specific to loan disclosures. Examiners should develop a detailed understanding of the entity's ability to timely and accurately provide all required disclosures to determine whether its policies, procedures, and practices are consistent with applicable law. Examiners should focus CMS review and testing on assessing the program's effectiveness and finding the root cause for any violations found in transaction testing.

Module 7 – Underwriting

This module focuses on an entity's underwriting practices. Examiners should focus their transaction testing on whether an entity is meeting ability-to-repay (ATR) underwriting obligations—specifically, the institution made a reasonable, good faith determination of a reasonable consumer's ability to repay the loan according to its terms. Examiners should be prepared to confirm an institution's reliance on third-party records to verify ability-to-repay factors. Examiners should also determine if high-cost or higher-priced mortgages are being made and assess the origination of these loans for compliance with the TILA.

This module includes CMS procedures specific to underwriting. Examiners should develop a detailed understanding of the entity's underwriting practices to determine whether its underwriting policies, procedures, and practices are consistent with the requirements of applicable laws and regulations. Examiners should focus CMS review and testing on assessing the program's effectiveness and finding the root cause for any violations found in transaction testing.

Transaction Testing

This section of the Procedures applies only to mortgage lenders, not mortgage brokers.

Regulation Z

Ability-to-Repay Mortgages

1. Determine whether the lender meets the requirement to consider ATR for consumer-purpose, closed-end loans secured by a dwelling. Review the documentation used to make underwriting decisions, including applications, tax returns, verifications of income, assets, and employment, credit reports, and all other required documentation. Please refer to the TILA examination procedures, Minimum Standards for Transactions Secured by a Dwelling – Section 1026.43, and Ability to Repay – Section 1026.43(c), for more information.

Assess the loans for compliance with ability-to-repay requirements. Please refer to the TILA examination procedures, Ability-to-Repay – Section 1026.43(c), for more information.
3. For loans made using automated underwriting systems, determine whether the originator entered the correct inputs and that all of the conditions on the feedback certificate were satisfied and documented before the loan was funded.

Qualified Mortgages (QMs)

1. If the creditor originates general qualified mortgages as a way to meet TILA's ability-to-repay requirements, determine whether these loans directly meet the ATR requirements under Section 1026.43(c), or

- a. Determine whether the qualified mortgages contain all terms necessary for qualified mortgages and no prohibited terms. Please refer to the TILA examination procedures, Qualified Mortgages Section - 1026.43(e), for more information;
 - b. Assess whether the points and fees are within the required limits. Please refer to the TILA examination procedures, Qualified Mortgages - Section 1026.43(e), for more information;

3. If the creditor originates FHA or VA loans, determine:
- a. Whether there is evidence in the loan file that the loan is guaranteed or insured by FHA or VA and therefore meets the FHA and VA QM requirements.⁸

⁸The temporary QM rule does not apply to HUD loans or to VA loans because they are qualified mortgages pursuant to 12 U.S.C. §1639c(b)(3)(B)(ii)(I)-(II), which authorizes HUD and VA to promulgate QM rules. HUD issued its final QM rule, effective January 10, 2014 (78 Fed. Reg. 75215, December 11, 2013), and VA issued its interim final QM rule, effective May 9, 2014 (79 Fed. Reg. 26620, May 9, 2014).

4. For qualified mortgages where the points and fees exceeded the applicable threshold and the creditor attempted to cure the error, determine that the creditor reimbursed the appropriate amount
 - a. within 210 days after consummation and
 - b. prior to the consumer instituting an action in connection with the loan, or
 - c. prior to the consumer providing written notice to the creditor of the error, or
 - d. prior to the consumer becoming 60 days past due on the legal obligation.

Please refer to the TILA examination procedures, Qualified Mortgages – Section 1026.43(e), for more information.

⁹ A “high-cost” loan is a consumer credit transaction secured by the consumer’s principal dwelling, in which either:

- The APR at consummation will exceed by more than 6.5 percentage points for first-lien mortgage loans, or by more than 8.5 percentage points for subordinate-lien mortgage loans, the average prime offer rate (APOR); or
- The total points and fees (as defined in the regulation) payable by the consumer at or before loan closing will exceed the greater of 5 percent of the total loan amount or, for transactions of less than $20,000, the lesser of $1,000 or 8 percent of the loan amount; or
- There is a prepayment penalty over 2 percent of the amount prepaid that can be charged more than 36 months after consummation or account opening.

See the FFIEC rate spread calculator: <http://www.ffiec.gov/ratespread/newcalc.aspx>, and the APOR spreadsheet at: <http://www.ffiec.gov/ratespread/aportables.htm>.

4. Determine whether the creditor structures a higher-priced mortgage loan as an open-end plan to evade the requirements of Regulation Z. Please refer to the TILA examination procedures on Evasion of Minimum Standards for Loans Secured by a Dwelling – Section 1026.43(h).

Home Equity Lines of Credit (HELOCs)

1. Determine for all home equity plans with a variable rate that the APR is based on an independent index. Further, ensure home equity plans are terminated or terms changed only if certain conditions exist. (Section 1026.40(f))
2. Determine that, if any consumer rejected a home equity plan because a disclosed term changed before the plan was opened, all fees were refunded. Verify that non-refundable fees were not imposed until three business days after the consumer received the required disclosures and brochure. (Section 1026.40(g) and (h))
3. Additional variable rate testing: Verify that when accounts were opened or loans were consummated, the loan contract terms were recorded correctly in the financial institution's calculation systems (e.g., its computer). Determine the accuracy of the following recorded information:

¹⁰ A “higher-priced” mortgage loan is a consumer credit transaction secured by the consumer’s principal dwelling with an APR that exceeds the average prime offer rate for a comparable transaction as of the date the interest rate is set by:

- 1.5 or more percentage points for loans secured by a first lien on a dwelling;
- 2.5 or more percentage points for loans secured by a first lien with a principal obligation at consummation that exceeds the limit in effect as of the date the transaction's interest rate is set for the maximum principal obligation eligible for purchase by Freddie Mac; or
- 3.5 or more percentage points for loans secured by a subordinate lien on a dwelling.

- a. Index value,
- b. Margin and method of calculating rate changes,
- c. Rounding method, and
- d. Adjustment caps (periodic and lifetime).

Evasion

1. Determine whether the creditor structures a mortgage loan as an open-end plan to evade the requirements of Regulation Z. Please refer to the TILA examination procedures on Evasion of Minimum Standards for Loans Secured by a Dwelling – Section 1026.43(h).

Other Risks to Consumers

2. Review communication logs or notes in the mortgage loan files, and interview sales and production staff of the mortgage lender or broker to determine the independence of underwriters from the sales or production unit, with an emphasis on any influence mortgage loan originators may have over underwriters. Please refer to the UDAAP examination procedures, Employees and Third Parties Interacting with Consumers, for more information.
3. Review the loan file to determine whether loan documentation, including income documentation, has been altered or forged. Any indications of fraud should be handled in accordance with CFPB internal consultation procedures, and examiners should refer them to other authorities as appropriate.
4. Determine whether the compensation systems for underwriters (whether in-house or contracted) affect their incentives concerning the speed and quality of their underwriting. Please refer to the UDAAP examination procedures, Employees and Third Parties Interacting with Consumers, for more information.
5. If the lender offers non-traditional or subprime loan products:
 - a. Determine if underwriting standards take adjusted payments into account in considering borrower ability to repay at expected payment change dates.
 - b. If the lender offers loans that have two or more risky characteristics (called “risk layering”), determine whether risk layering is taken into account as part of the underwriting policies, whether any mitigating factors are required for approval, and whether actual underwriting practices conform with policies. Risky characteristics are any of the following:
 - i. Limited or no documentation of income, assets, and/or employment;
 - ii. Simultaneous second lien;

- iii. Negative amortization, option payment, or interest-only features;
 - iv. Introductory rate 200 basis points or more below fully-indexed rate;

Please refer to the UDAAP examination procedures for more information.

Record Retention

1. Assess whether the lender verifies and maintains a record of the information relied on for all ATR loans (QM and non-QM) for a period of three years. Please refer to the TILA examination procedures, General Procedures, for more information.

CMS Review and Testing

1. Assess the creditor's compliance management system as it relates to underwriting. Assess whether there are:
 - a. Verifiable standards for qualifying borrowers, including ranges/limits for applicable debt-to-income (DTI) ratios, credit scores, and loan-to-value (LTV) ratios for the different loan products offered by the institution;
 - b. Authenticated processes and bases for approving exceptions to underwriting standards. Determine whether the creditor frequently uses exceptions to override underwriting decisions;
 - c. Standards and methods for determining, verifying, and documenting that the borrower has the ability to repay the loan.

Please refer to the CMR examination procedures for more information.

Module 8 – Examiner Conclusions and Wrap-Up

To conclude this supervisory activity, examiners must complete all steps under this section, regardless of the entity's risk profile.

1. Summarize the findings, supervisory concerns, and regulatory violations.
2. For the violations noted, determine the root cause by identifying weaknesses in internal controls, audit and compliance reviews, training, management oversight, or other factors. Determine whether the violation(s) are pattern or practice, or isolated.
3. Identify action needed to correct violations and weaknesses in the institution's compliance management system, as appropriate.
4. Discuss findings with the institution's management and, if necessary, obtain a commitment for corrective action.
5. Record violations according to Bureau policy in the Report of Examination/Supervisory Letter and CFPB's electronic database system to facilitate analysis and reporting.
6. If the examiner believes enforcement action may be appropriate, contact appropriate agency personnel for guidance.
7. Prepare a memorandum for inclusion in the work papers and CFPB's official system of record that outlines planning and strategy considerations for the next examination and, if appropriate, interim follow-up.
