You have many different credit scores

It’s normal to see slightly different numbers

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Score</th>
<th>Source</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>726</td>
<td>Online, provided by your credit card company</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>698</td>
<td>Signed up for a separate, free credit monitoring service, and checked your score there</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>711</td>
<td>Auto lender showed you the credit score it used to evaluate your loan application</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

TIP: At a given point in time, lenders are probably looking at slightly different scores than the ones you see.

Scores are calculated at different times, in different ways

Credit report data
A score uses data from a credit reporting company, and each may have slightly different data:
- Equifax
- Experian
- TransUnion
- Others

Timing
Your scores are not calculated on a fixed schedule, so they depend on:
- When data is updated at a reporting company
- When your score is actually calculated

Scoring models
Companies have created multiple versions of their scoring models and update them frequently:
- FICO
- VantageScore
- Other custom models

TIP: Parts of the credit score business are beyond your control. What you can do is make it a habit to check your credit reports each year through annualcreditreport.com and fix any errors.

Your credit history and behavior form the basis of your credit scores

- Payment history
- Current unpaid debt
- Length of credit history
- % of available credit used
- Type of debt and when it started
- New applications for credit

TIP: The way you use and repay debt affects your credit score, so your score can be helpful in tracking and improving your credit use and behavior. Paying loans on time and staying well below your credit limit helps you get and keep good credit scores.
